From: Suzanne B. Woods, Chair
Illinois State Advisory Council on the Education of Children with Disabilities

Subject: Annual Report 2008-2009

On behalf of the Illinois State Advisory Council on the Education of Children with Disabilities (ISAC), we are pleased to submit this report summarizing the Council’s activities and accomplishments during its 2008-2009 sessions.

ISAC had experienced attrition of members whose terms had expired or who had resigned due to personal reasons. We are pleased to announce in this report that we are now, thanks to recent gubernatorial appointments, nearly a full Council, with the exception of the following: two spots for parents of children with disabilities, one spot for a student with a disability, one spot for a Regional Superintendent, and one spot for a LEA Superintendent. We hope soon to have people named to these positions as each of these are integral to the work our Council does on behalf of children with disabilities in the state. Members now represent most areas of the state as parents of children with disabilities, persons with disabilities, one member at large, educators, and governmental service agencies. We are pleased to announce that now members of the committee will also represent the two teachers’ unions, Illinois Federation of Teachers and Illinois Education Association. ISAC committees include: Executive, Access, Bilingual, Comprehensive State Plan, General Supervision/Due Process, Family Communications, Finance, Legislation, Personnel Development, Transition, and Rules and Regulations.

The Council once again provided comment on state and federal proposed rules implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Improvement Act of 2004 (IDEA). ISAC provided public comment both to ISBE and to other legislative venues in order to get the special education rules into statute. The Chair provided public comment to the State Board of Education regarding the emergency Part 401 Rules. Two members of the Finance Committee also provided public comment regarding a more equitable funding for special education. In the spring, ISAC members held a legislative breakfast at the Capitol in order to educate legislators about the importance and duties of ISAC. The breakfast, as well as the decorations, were completely prepared by special education students in various programs from around the state. ISAC has also continued to analyze the effect of the No Child Left Behind initiatives on students with disabilities, address the critical shortage of highly qualified personnel in special education, expressed concern about the lack of funding to provide adequate special education services, monitored Illinois’ progress regarding educating children with disabilities in the least restrictive environment, and changes that have been made regarding the Illinois Alternate Assessment and Due Process System. ISAC established a new standing committee, Transition, in order to look closely at this important element of a student’s education. This year ISAC was one of the sponsors for the Illinois Statewide Transition Conference attended by more than 900 students, parents, and professionals demonstrating the importance of transition to families in the state. ISAC members continue to provide public testimony both before the Illinois State Board of Education and before legislative committees on issues that impact students with disabilities.

ISAC appreciates your support in making a free and appropriate public education a reality for all students in Illinois. Thank you for your commitment to maintaining the level of services necessary for every student to attain his or her individualized program goals.
Mission Statement

The role of the Illinois State Advisory Council on the Education of Children with Disabilities is to be a proactive body, advising the Governor, Legislature and State Board of Education on current issues relating to the education of children and youth with disabilities, as well as the unmet needs of these children and their families. Barriers to Success

1. There is inadequate economic support to school districts to implement the mandates of IDEA04 and NCLB. The level of services and the quality of services available to Illinois school age children who have disabilities is significantly uneven throughout the state. A fair and equitable formula which would improve the ability of some smaller and rural districts to cope with the mandates resulting from IDEA04 and NCLB, is imperative. Programs to train those “highly qualified” teachers mandated by NCLB are victims of this inadequate funding.

2. Staffing levels within the Department of Special Education at ISBE remain inadequate to meet the educational needs of students with disabilities, families, school personnel and ISAC.

3. ISAC is often requested to provide advice on special education matters without adequate time to meet, evaluate, discuss and make recommendations.

Accomplishments

During the period covered by this report, ISAC has accomplished the following:

1. ISAC gave Public Comment on the Part 401 Rules.

2. The ISAC Ad Hoc Communications Committee created and distributed a Newsletter to stakeholder groups twice this year including General Assembly Members, educators, and parents of children with a disability.

3. ISAC members were active participants in the planning and organizing the State Transition Conference.

4. The ISAC Transition Committee spearheaded a statewide stakeholder group that is working to champion transitioning across the state.

5. ISAC had a representative present at the ISBE Budget Hearings held around the state.

6. ISAC hosted a Legislative Breakfast in the Rotunda of the Capitol Building with special education students from schools across the state greeting the legislators, preparing and serving the breakfast.

7. Members of ISAC continue to be active participants on the ISBE Alliance for School-based Problem-solving and Intervention Resources in Education.

8. Members of ISAC participated in the LEA Determination Stakeholder group. The stakeholder group meetings identified the means by which an LEA would be identified to one of four categories: meets requirements, needs assistance, needs intervention, or needs substantial intervention in regards to explicit sections in the State Performance Plan.

9. The ISAC reviewed nine Comprehensive Plans for withdrawal:

10. ISAC continued to review the Comprehensive Plans as requested.

11. Participation on the ISBE stakeholder group preparing the parents guide.

APPENDICES

Appendix A: Letter to ISBE relative to the Rochester CUSD 3A withdrawal

December 11, 2008

Dear Dr. Ferguson,

The Illinois State Advisory Council on the Education of Children with Disabilities (ISAC) is statutorily created by Section 14-3.01 of the School Code of Illinois. The purpose of the Council includes advice to the State Board of Education regarding modifications or additions to county or regional comprehensive plans. To this end, I write regarding the Comprehensive Withdraw Plan of the Rochester Community Unit District 3a. to withdraw from Sangamon Area Special Education District (SASED).

The ISAC reviewed the Comprehensive Plan on June 11, 2008 and reported the summary to the Council. On this date, a presentation and question/answer period was held with the Rochester District Superintendent, Pupil Services Director of the district, parents of a Rochester student with special education needs, and the Special Education Director of SASED.

On June 12, 2008, the ISAC carried a motion to recommend the ISBE approve the Comprehensive Plan for withdraw of the Rochester CUSD 3a from SASED given they provide the following information to the ISBE:

1. A plan for provision of appropriately certified staff to serve students with a disability as required under the Individuals with Disabilities Act (IDEA).
2. Assess impact to the remaining districts in the Cooperative.
3. Obtain the Cooperative Separation Agreement.
4. Obtain approval of the ROE relative to the separation.

We believe that Rochester CUSD 3a will have the capacity to provide excellent services to children with disabilities and appreciate the work completed on the comprehensive plan.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Conran
Committee Chair: Comprehensive Planning Committee
Appendix B: Letter to Aimee Veith from Chair

December 24, 2008

Ms. Aimee Veith
Illinois School for the Deaf
125 Webster
Jacksonville IL 62650

Dear Ms. Veith:

The Illinois State Advisory Council on the Education of Children with Disabilities (ISAC) appreciates your efforts to bring to our attention some of the difficulties faced in securing appropriate services for students who have complex educational needs as a result of multiple disabilities.

Because our role is to address systemic issues, we are not able to respond to your individual situation. However, we want to assure you that you were heard and that we are sensitive to the issues you present.

We will be asking ISBE staff to report back to us about whether there is a pattern in the nature of special education complaints involving provision of special education services to address secondary disabilities. We would encourage you to review information about the special education complaint process (you can access this information by calling 217-782-5589 or at the following website http://www.isbe.net/spec-ed/html/complaint_investigation.htm) and consider whether this would be an appropriate course of action in your situation.

We want to acknowledge your effort in sharing your thoughts through your statement and letter. Your commitment to ensuring the needs of Illinois students with hearing loss are met is appreciated.

Sincerely,

Susy Woods
Chair, ISAC

High Expectation: Priority One for Successful Transition

The Transition Committee of ISAC is a diverse group, made up of parents of children with disabilities, school and special education administrators, educators, advocates, agency staff, and others who support improved opportunities for young people receiving special education services. The core values defined by this committee regarding transition are as follows:

1. High expectations lead to success in life.
2. All students can and will succeed.
3. The greatest level of independence possible is an expectation.
4. Students must be prepared for post-secondary education and/or employment with adult services and supports in place.
5. All students have a right to quality education that yields successful outcomes.
6. Transition services must be infused seamlessly into the educational process.

In discussion of the transition issues that impact families with transitioning youth, the conversations repeatedly return to what is believed to be the singular most important condition for transition success. Time after time, it is concluded that “high expectations” for all students is the critical element for success. The absence of “high expectations” is primary on the list of barriers to student accomplishment in transition. The need for “high expectations” is also number one on the list of priorities for continuous improvement of transition processes.

Extensive research on the effect of “high expectations” has revealed a strong correlation between collective expectations and the ultimate success for a student enrolled in any educational program. Simply stated, when “high expectations” exist, students succeed. This doesn’t mean that supports are unnecessary. On the contrary, eliminating the need for complete autonomy is sometimes the difference between perceived failure and success. In summary, having “high expectations” means working to achieve dreams, not dismissing them.

A wealth of information is available regarding strategies that make transition effective, thereby producing successful outcomes for young adults. So why does a gap continue to exist between what is known to work and what is actually observed? Why do students, parents, and educators who want more than standard transition options continue to spend the majority of their time convincing those who hold the keys to funding and support that there are greater possibilities?

Parents, educators, service providers, and others who support students and young adults with disabilities must have a vision beyond what is typical, what is currently available, and what has been done successfully in the past. A report from Cornell University's Employment and Disability Institute 2008 population survey showed that only 17.6% of men and women who have a condition that limits their ability to work are, in fact, employed. This speaks volumes about our inability to overcome an outdated paradigm when it comes to those with special needs and their opportunity for employment.
How do we know that there are greater possibilities for students with disabilities in transition in Illinois? We know because there are young people with disabilities working with and without supports in all workforce arenas. We know because there are young adults with disabilities attending college. We know because young adults with disabilities own and run their own businesses. We know it is possible, because it occurs! These scenarios are not made reality by the young adults with disabilities alone. These young adults may have family members who spend countless, unpaid hours advocating for them. Additionally, these students may have had teachers, social workers, or job coaches who went to great lengths to cultivate exciting and meaningful opportunities. Finally, these students may also have other adult role models, friends, and mentors with disabilities who demonstrate how very possible it is to live a positive, healthy and successful life with a disability. Unfortunately, this circle of support and confidence is much too rare, but nonetheless vital to transition success.

Changing the paradigm is not an easy task. Belief in the unlimited potential of all human beings and the understanding that everyone has a right to be a contributing member of society is, unfortunately, not yet a universal value. No one ever admits to low expectations, but the evidence is clear as seen in the unemployment statistics. If a way is found to gain acceptance of this new paradigm, wouldn't the transitioning process be inevitably better?

There are many legitimate systemic issues that impact transition planning. It is recognized that a significant increase in funding is necessary to provide the services and supports needed by transitioning students. Furthermore, a lack of transportation resources remains a serious limitation to successful transition planning statewide. These are undeniably major issues that must be addressed.

Additionally, Illinois participates in a structured and well-established system or “institutionalized” culture. There is optimism about the prospect for great change in the near future, but this culture continues to limit imagination when it comes to transition. Currently, students with the most significant disabilities are encouraged to consider sheltered workshops before making real efforts at community employment. Sheltered workshops, like institutional residential settings, are obsolete in many states. All work is honorable but efforts must be made to expand customized and community-integrated employment opportunities for those whose interests are elsewhere, beyond the traditional “food, filth, and flowers.” All realms of interest deserve exploration and respectful effort. Students of all ability levels need the opportunity for real work and the satisfaction of contributing to the communities to which they belong.

Few of us would choose to live in congregate settings with people unfamiliar, and often dissimilar to ourselves. However, in practice, relatively few options beyond this exist for young people with disabilities in Illinois. About 67% of high school graduates elect to attend college. For most young adults with disabilities, this goal is unreachable because the supports and services needed to participate are simply unavailable.

Students with disabilities are frequently blamed for failures that occur in their own education or vocational programs. When students are unsuccessful at learning a new concept or skill, they are frequently assumed to be incapable, or unwilling. Opportunities are denied as a result. It is rare for the system or program to be challenged.

"In 1984, Anne Donnellan, a respected researcher in special education, wrote that "the criterion of least dangerous assumption holds that in the absence of conclusive data, educational decisions ought to be based on assumptions which, if incorrect, will have the least dangerous effect on the likelihood that students will be able to functional independently as adults." Furthermore, she concluded "we should assume that poor performance is due to instructional inadequacy rather than to student deficits." In other words, if a student does not do well, the quality of the instruction should be questioned before the student's ability to learn. Thus, for Donnellan, the least-dangerous assumption when working with students with significant disabilities is to assume that they are competent and able to learn, because to do otherwise would result in harm such as fewer educational opportunities, inferior literacy instruction, a segregated education, and fewer choices as an adult."

Personal creativity and resourcefulness should be the primary focus of repair efforts. To best facilitate continuous improvement for students with disabilities, the question must be “how” rather than “why.”

In conclusion, we (parents and caregivers, educators, administrators and agency personnel) need to ask ourselves:

✔ Is every means available being used to find out what the student really loves and wants for his/her future?
✔ Are possibilities being built around those individual dreams?
✔ Has the transitioning youth’s family, school district, and agency made a commitment to a philosophy of high expectations?
✔ Is outdated and narrow thinking challenged when it is encountered, both personally and professionally?
✔ Are the programs and policies that support transition congruent with high expectations?
✔ If the answer to any of these questions is "no", a starting point for individual and/or systemic efforts for change is offered.

This committee is devoted to addressing the important issues outlined above. It is understood that change is a process and that work must be within the boundaries of the respective systems. Furthermore, it is known that individuals joining together around a common vision are powerful and this transition committee intends to contribute positively to the expeditious evolution of the transition process in Illinois. “High expectation” was chosen as this committee’s first priority because all committee members unanimously agreed that it is the key to success.

Please join in the effort to promote and advocate for high expectations and expanded transition opportunities for students with disabilities in Illinois.
