BEFORE- AND AFTER-SCHOOL PROGRAMS SUMMARY REPORT FOR FY 2004

As required by Section 2-3.11b of the School Code, the Illinois State Board of Education collects data from public school districts regarding the general nature and operation of before- and after-school programs. Before- and after-school programs are designed to provide supervision and other academic and social help to children before and/or after regular school hours. The data included in this report were collected for only those programs operated for public school districts.

In 2003-2004, there were 540 public school districts operating approximately 772 before- and after-school programs (an increase of approximately 9% from 2002-2003). Of these programs, 418 were operated by school districts and 243 were operated by another agency in space provided by or leased from the public school district. The 111 programs were contracted out by the school district, mainly to Regional Offices and other community based organizations. Of the programs that districts leased space to other agencies, 49 percent were operated by the YMCA/YWCA, and 44 percent by local park districts.

Other findings include:

- Before- and after-school programs served a total of 261,131 students. This represents an 11 percent increase over those served in 2002-2003 (234,810). The Chicago District served 144,670 students in their program. Almost 63 percent of program enrollment was pre-kindergarten to fifth grade students. The common age group of students served was 6 to 12 years.
- Both before- and after-school programs were offered by 35 percent of the programs. Approximately 57 percent of the operating programs offered after-school only. About 16 percent of all programs offered services on school days and holidays, and 18 percent in the summer, while only three percent offered programs on Saturdays and Sundays.
- Almost 67 percent of operating programs were open to all children in the public school district who met the age requirement for the program, and about 56 percent of the programs were also offered to low achieving students.
- Seventy-one percent of programs provided homework help, and 58% provided tutoring. Other major services provided were recreation (55%), arts and crafts (51%), and supervised play (48%). About 23 percent of the programs provided services in literacy education, and library services/reading. Storytelling, athletics activities, and technology were other activities provided during before- and after-school programs.
- Only about 12 percent of the programs reported having children on a waiting list. The number of children on a waiting list increased from 3,431 in 2002-2003 to 3,901 in 2003-2004. Funding, transportation, and lack of space were the major reasons for not serving all children.

- There were 13,009 certified staff, and 3,458 non-certified staff were employed. There were also 1,963 high school/college students and 1,001 non-paid staff were involved in these programs.
- About 81 percent of the programs reported measuring the progress of their program. About 58 percent of the programs reported measuring the progress by parent/student satisfaction, and 45 percent measured the progress by student's academic growth and students returning to the program, while 28 percent measured the students behavior changes.
- Thirty-four percent of the programs reported working in collaboration to conduct the before- and after-school programs. Out of those collaborations, 58 percent were with community-based agencies, and other major collaborations were with recreational and cultural entities (30%), and colleges and universities (28%).
- The major source of funds for these programs was parent fees (44%). Only 47 percent of these programs provided the total parent fee collected. The total reported amount collected from the parents was $20,140,308. The other major source was federal funds (29%), which mainly included Title I funds and 21st Century Program funds. Local school districts provided funds for 19 percent of the programs.
- Only 560 programs out of 772 (72%) provided the total cost of the program. The estimated operational costs of before- and after-school programs ranged from $000 to $68,362. The total cost reported for these programs was $87,302,494.
